(FOR ADDRESS ONLY.)

Pixies' Cross, Whitchurch Down, Dartmoor. Whitchurch Down is situated on a lofty eminence affording magnificent views of the surrounding moorland country. An interesting feature of the Down is the Pixies' Cross, a granite structure erected for a twofold object, namely, as a guidepost and as a safeguard against the pranks of the pixies, who at times saw fit to mislead travellers on their way across the moor. The locality is picturesque and repays exploration.

Dear Ralph,

Uncle Charlie & I have no lovely sand to play with like you have but we climb the hills, watch the cows & pick the flowers & berries. Just look at this picture & you will see how pretty it all is. Love & kisses from Auntie Ethel
